Racket Shreve '63, a Salem native and graduate of Rhode Island School of Design, served in the United States Army as a field illustrator and graphic designer for the Deputy Joint Chiefs of Staff. He then worked as a freelance illustrator in Boston. His work has been reproduced in Boston Magazine, Atlantic Monthly and Sail Magazine. Shreve's work is focused mainly on maritime subjects and the panoramas of New England. He has sailed the North Shore waters for more than 35 years, and his work reflects a keen perception of its various traditional vessels and panoramas. Shreve's work hangs at Brooks School and in private collections and institutions that include the United States Department of Defense, the United States Department of the Interior, the Peabody Essex Museum and Forbes.
